

From: Corni, Dave (GEAE, Digital)
To: 'microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov'
Date: 11/20/01 4:22pm
Subject: Microsoft

Your understanding of how microsoft does business is not adequate enough for you to make a decision.

Your understanding of technology is obviously very limited.

Microsoft blocks competition by buying, not creating, functionality and incorporating it into their "operating system". Hell, they didn't even buy it from Sun Microsystems, they stole it!

Did you realize that now Microsoft is competing with manufacturers of MP3 players? Yup, they put an MP3 player into their latest version of their "operating system". And that is just one example of technology that they are destroying by questionable methods. There is also the questionable sales and licensing tactics that they use to keep their competition out of major markets. Then there is the technology that they just steal.

And how do you punish them? By putting the software in question, unchanged, into millions of potential consumer hands, so they can grow up thinking how great Microsoft is. You are literally paying Microsoft to advertise.

It'll be the best ad campaign since Joe Camel.

You are a group of incompetent clods who should have removed yourself from the case for not understanding the technology enough to make a decision. Congratulations on being stupid.